Eli Perkins.

"Eli Perkins," Melville D. Landon addressed a large audience at the Baptist church last night, which for an hour and a half he kept continually convulsed with laughter.

Mr. Fuller was scarcely able to walk, the injury being due to a railroad accident, but the audience did not seem to realize it, owing to the ridiculous manner in which he told of it.

While in Daytona, Mr. Landon was the guest of his nephew, W. H. Davis, on Magnolia avenue.

Anton Mason bought a lot on the corner of South and Daytona streets from Mrs. Coleman. During the coming summer he expects to build on it.

As will be seen by an announcement elsewhere, Dr. F. E. Houghton with his dental boat "Dentos" will be in Daytona on or before February 25. Dr. Houghton is well and favorably known in and around Daytona, and is always welcome here.

An Old Favorite

PARADISE

By Frederick William Faber

FREDERICK WILLIAM FABER, clergyman, priest and hymn writer, was born in Calverley, Yorkshire, England, in 1814 and died in Bromley, Kent, England, in 1863. He was ordained in the Anglican church, 1837. He left the Roman Catholic communion, 1845, and founded a religious community of his own. Faber wrote many hymns that have gained widespread favor by their sweetness and spirituality.

O PARADISE, O Paradise,
Who doth not crave for rest?
Who would not seek the happy land
Where they that loved are blest?
Where loyal hearts and true
Stand ever in the light,
All rapture through and through,
In God's most holy sight.

O Paradise, O Paradise,
The world is growing old;
Who would not be glad to rest and free
Where love is never cold?
Where loyal hearts and true
Stand ever in the light,
All rapture through and through,
In God's most holy sight.

O Paradise, O Paradise,
Where they shall sin no more,
Who strive to be as pure on earth
As on thy spotless shore,
Where loyal hearts and true
Stand ever in the light,
All rapture through and through,
In God's most holy sight.

O Paradise, O Paradise,
I greatly long to see
The heavenly place my dearest Lord
Is destining for me,
Where loyal hearts and true
Stand ever in the light,
All rapture through and through,
In God's most holy sight.

O Paradise, O Paradise,
I feel 'twill not be long;
Patient I cannot think I bear
Faint fragrance of thy song;
Where loyal hearts and true
Stand ever in the light,
All rapture through and through,
In God's most holy sight.

HER SEASON.

Pale as the breaking of the dawn,
Graceful as a fawn,
Modest, yet sweet,
With shy and covert eyes,
A blushing cheek,
Neck,
Demure,
Cute,
As the winter snow,
And so
Cunning you can't resist her,
Hey, mister,
Do you guess?
Yes?
Of course you do.
Could mistake the June bride,
All veil and a card aside?
All wool, of course, be figuratively speaking.
But
Were we seeking
The exact truth we would say
Lawn, muslin, and piqué,
Both fluffy, light as air,
The stuff that laughs scorn,
With sunshine worn,
And well may she, being one,
Adopt their style of dress
As we go to press.
We see no reason why
She should be denied, money cannot buy
We are free to state
Anything too good for her.
She holds the center of the stage;
In all the rage,
And well deserves to be.
But, let's see,
What of the June bridegroom?
Is there to room
For him?
Yes, in some corner dim
He sits subdued,
In passive mood,
Knowing that he has to play
A poor second and that he may
Be thankful, though it jars his pride,
To be the acme of the June bride.

Indian Territory Settlers.

The summer and fall of 1904 will witness the greatest emigration to Indian Territory of any year in the history of the territory. Thousands of those who go will be entirely ignorant of the conditions, areas and people there. The total land area of Indian Territory is 31,000 square miles. The population in 1901 was 180,182, and in 1903 it was 392,060, an average yearly increase of 21.74 per cent. At this rate the population for the year 1904 was 477,355, and at the close of the year 1904 it will be 580,604. There are 87,000 Indians and 20,000 negroes or citizenship rolls.—Kansas City Star.

Ventriloquism.

Ventriloquism is but the peculiar method of vocalization which, differing from the ordinary colloquial way of making articulations forward in the mouth, alters the directions of these sounds by so managing the conformation of the mouth and lips as to keep back the vocalized sounds and cause their utterance to be so modified and hollow as to appear those sounds more or less remote. It may be described as the art of speaking in such a way as to cause a hearer to believe that the sound comes not from the person speaking, but from a different source. The sounds are formed by the same organs as the emissions of sound commonly—the larynx, the palate, the tongue, the lips, etc.

The art of the ventriloquist consists merely in this: After drawing a long breath the performer breathes it out slowly and gradually, dexterously modifying and diminishing the sound of the voice by the muscles of the larynx and the palate. Besides this, he moves his lips as little as possible and by various contrivances diverts the attention of his audience.

Death of a Prominent Visitor

Alexander Halliday, a well known reporter in New York, died Monday night at the residence of Geo. W. Monroe, on Ridgewood avenue.

Mr. Halliday arrived in Daytona several weeks ago with the intention of spending the season here, and located at The Ridgewood. During the automobile races he caught a severe cold, due to exposure during the cold snap which prevailed and was confined to his room at the hotel.

Although 70 years of age, Mr. Halliday would easily have passed for 50, and was a hearty and fine looking man, hardly a promising looking subject for a serious case of pneumonia, and no apprehension was felt of a fatal ending.

Later Mr. Halliday was moved to the residence of his friend, Mr. Munroe, in order that he might have better care and here everything was done to alleviate his suffering. When it was seen that death was inevitable his son, Alexander B. Halliday, a prominent lawyer of New York, the only near relative of the deceased, was telegraphed for and reached here yesterday noon.

The body, accompanied by the son, left here yesterday for Yonkers, New York, the former home of Mr. Halliday, where it will be interred.

Geo. N. Chamberlain, Geo. H. Munroe, J. D. Robertson, Geo. M. P. Holt, Solomon Frankenfield, E. H. Sperry, Mr. Bly, Mr. Shields and Aleck Braden were the pall bearers.

State Items.

A trolley line is proposed for Miami.

Palatka will have a street fair next week.

County Clerk Dearborn, of Dade county, has been summoned to appear before the United States Senate as a witness in the Swayne trail.

The Atlantic Coast Line will soon make many improvements in terminal facilities at Fort Myers.

The annual meeting of the board of trustees of the John B. Stetson University at De Land, will be held the 16th.

THE PALMETTO STREET SEWERS

The Manholes Too High to Drain the Property at Palmetto and Cedar Streets.

Property owners in the neighborhood of Cedar and Palmetto streets are much put out at the way the sewer was built which is intended to drain that section of the city.

This sewer was completed several weeks ago, since which time there have been no heavy rains. This sewer cost the property owners 77 cents per foot, which is said to be the highest charge ever made for similar work. With many more openings the Cottage avenue sewer cost but 52 cents a foot, and why there should be such a difference property owners are anxious to learn.

The two principal manholes, located at the intersection of Cedar and Palmetto, are considerably higher than the surrounding ground, except to the westward, as can readily be seen by anyone who takes a careful survey of the property, and when the heavy spring rains set in, pools of water are certain to collect there, which will have to rise above the crossing before it can reach the opening.

R. J. Knight is going into the peach growing business on a large scale near Crystal River. He has set out eleven hundred trees and expects to have one of the best peach orchards in Florida.

The new bridge across Miami river at the foot of Twelfth street is so far completed Friday as to admit of the crossing of teams.

[illegible] factory at Palmetto market is engaging in an industry which should spread all over South Florida.

Today the bond election will be held to determine whether the town of Kissimmee will bond itself in the sum of $5,000 for street improvement and $1,200 to take up the mortgage held by parties against the cemetery.

BANQUET TO PALMETTO CLUB

Given by Mrs. L. O. Rawson Last Night Proves a Brilliant Social Success.

A banquet was tendered the literary department of the Palmetto Club by Mrs. L. O. Rawson at her home on Ridgewood avenue last night which proved a delightful affair. The Club has just finished the study of American literature and will now take up the Egyptian. For this reason the decorations consisted of American and Egyptian flags and streamers. A handsome Egyptian scarf furnished the decoration for the banquet table and at either end was an American and Egyptian flag. Each lady's place was indicated by Egyptian souvenir cards, which had the name written thereon and contained quotations from a cynic's calendar.

At each plate also there was a card, and pinned to it was an Egyptian and American flag, on the opposite side of which were quotations from prominent American authors. Another card contained a quotation in Egyptian which was intended to be translated by the ladies, the reverse side containing the correct translation which was concealed.

Covers were laid for twenty-two guests who were royally entertained by the hostess. The chairman, Mrs. DeCantillon Williams, in a few well chosen and appropriate words expressed her regret on retiring and introduced her successor, Miss Cecilia A. Harris, who responded to the toast. Toasts were given the retiring chairman, the hostess and the class as a whole.

The occasion was marked by the unusual brilliancy of the wit and humor which flowed in an unceasing stream during the whole evening, making this banquet one long to be remembered with pleasure.

Dr. J. H. Pierson returned from Palm Beach yesterday.

Over a hundred people came in Tuesday on the various trains arriving during the day. Very few are leaving. Tuesday was the biggest day for arrivals since the races.

PERT PARAGRAPHS.

In spite of the Don't Worry clubs all the people worry some of the time, and some of the people worry all of the time.

A man isn't funny when he works hard at it.

Children are imitative and sometimes tell lies, and their parents wonder how they ever learned it.

Some men's heads are so swelled that it is a shame to have to crowd them into a two dollar hat.

Some people are jolly because they can't help it.

Job would hardly have succeeded in making a record if he had lived in a flat.

The man who never argues, simply lays down the law.

A bachelor is a misanthrope who prefers a state of lone cuddlity to a state of cupid's own-ity.

A gentleman is one who gives up his seat as cheerfully to a woman as to a lady.

If golf were not fashionable it would be work.

In the Country.

When the rattle of the reaper
Wakes the echoes of the hill,
Rousing me, my pride to keep me,
Down behind the old sawmill,
Lazily I ride my mare on
On my bed of fragrant clover.

Seems to me, all earthly cousins
Don't appreciate the finer
That the Hustle in town and dearest,
Wastes it on the fool in fashion.
Very serious is the reason,
They are scrambling all the season.

Not for me the rasp and rattle
Of the reaper in the wheat,
I had rather watch the cattle
Of the fragrant clover eat.
Rather lie here, cool and lazy,
Than to labor till I'm crazy.

Draughts of perfume, sweet as honey,
Know are filling fresh up here.
But the hard man-ic fussy
Sits a-fuming after beer;
Says the stuff that nature makes
Isn't what the barkeep takes.

PERT PARAGRAPHS.

The reformer who is ahead of his time and the foreigner who tries to speak English the first week after his arrival are both apt to be misunderstood.

Put a dollar in a balloon and it will go farther than if you put it in the bank.

Some men who pride themselves on their honesty would not hesitate to rob a bird nest.

A dog talks with his tail, but luckily he is not able to sing with that appendage.

When a man wishes he had taken his wife's advice he is careful not to let her know.

Man is unlike woman in that he does not parade his new hat around for the admiration of his companions. He is afraid they would ask him to buy the drinks on it.

A patriot is one who bleeds for his country; not one who bleeds his country.

BANQUET TO PALMETTO CLUB

Given by Mrs. L. O. Rawson Last Night Proves a Brilliant Social Success.

A banquet was tendered the literary department of the Palmetto Club by Mrs. L. O. Rawson at her home on Ridgewood avenue last night which proved a delightful affair.

The Club has just finished the study of American literature and will now take up the Egyptian. For this reason the decorations consisted of American and Egyptian flags and streamers. A handsome Egyptian scarf furnished the decoration for the banquet table and at either end was an American and Egyptian flag. Each lady's place was indicated by Egyptian souvenir cards, which had the name written thereon and contained quotations from a cynic's calendar.

At each plate also there was a card, and pinned to it was an Egyptian and American flag, on the opposite side of which were quotations from prominent American authors. Another card contained a quotation in Egyptian which was intended to be translated by the holder, the reverse side containing the correct translation which was concealed.

Covers were laid for twenty-two guests who were royally entertained by the hostess. The chairman, Mrs. DeCantillon Williams, in a few well chosen and appropriate words expressed her regret on retiring and introduced her successor, Miss Cecilia A. Harris, who responded to the toast. Toasts were given the retiring chairman, the hostess and the class as a whole.

The occasion was marked by the unusual brilliancy of the wit and humor which flowed in an unceasing stream during the whole evening, making this banquet one long to be remembered with pleasure.

Dr. J. H. Pierson returned from Palm Beach yesterday.

Over a hundred people came in Tuesday on the various trains arriving during the day. Very few are leaving. Tuesday was the biggest day for arrivals since the races.

As an illustration of the amount of business handled at this point by the Florida East Coast railroad, we learn that Agent W. F. Jibb has a force of eleven men employed in and around the depot. Passenger business has been heavier this year than ever before, and the January business is said to have been largely in excess of that done during January last year.

Croker's Death Reconciles Parents.

The death of Frank Croker has brought about a reconciliation between Richard Croker and his wife. Mr. and Mrs. Croker have been estranged for some years. Long before Mr. Croker took up his residence abroad he and his wife had practically separated, although they continued to live in the same house at No. 5 East Seventy-fourth street.

There never has been any bitter feeling between the couple, but their interests lay along different lines. Mrs. Croker devoted herself to charitable works and to her family. The attacks on her husband during the latter years that he was Tammany chieftain were extremely distasteful to her.

Frank Croker was the favorite son of his father, and he was a very devoted son to his mother. His death was a terrible blow to her and how hard Mr. Croker was by it was best shown by his haggard face when he arrived from Europe for the funeral.

Mrs. Croker is a very handsome woman, quiet and refined, and dresses in good taste, but is inclined to a domestic life. She was recognized as one of the most successful hostesses in the public schools of New York at the time of her marriage to Mr. Croker. Her chief interests are her church and charitable work and her family. She is a leader among Roman Catholics and is intimate with Archbishop Farley and other distinguished prelates of the church here and abroad.

From a list of real estate sales made by J. W. Wilkinson, published elsewhere in today's paper, it will be seen that the real estate business has been increasing in Daytona. If any, some in Florida can show such a list of transactions by one dealer. In the building line, also, there seems to be plenty doing, and new buildings are going up on every hand. Daytona is the magic city, and people are alive to the situation.

Local Hit By Eli Perkins

Eli made a hit last night which was hugely enjoyed by the audience. His last engagement was at De Land and on the way over here he experienced the usual long wait at New Smyrna where travelers must change cars. While strolling around the depot he accosted a venerable looking old gentleman and asked him how long he had lived in Florida.

"Eighty-six years at Daytona," was the reply.

"Why you must like it here," he exclaimed.

Tears came into the old man's eyes as he replied: "Yes, 86 years, but 13 years were spent here at New Smyrna waiting for trains."

The Election.

The election held today to elect a mayor and four councilmen has stirred up little enthusiasm, the vote polled promising to be very light. No returns of course are yet procurable, but the consensus of opinion seems to be that the present incumbents will all be reelected. It is likely that Geo. H. Clark will be elected to fill the unexpired term of Wm. Atwood, resigned.

The Bowsers' New Cook

He Fun in Practice Theories of His Own in Trying to Engage Her, but Without Success, and He Leaves the House in Disgust.

(Copyrighted, 1901, by T. C. McClure.)

UNTIL he got seated at the dinner table the other evening Mr. Bowser had no inkling that anything had happened to the house during the day. Then, missing the cook, he inquired what was the trouble, and Mrs. Bowser explained.

"I am sorry to say that Annie had to leave me this morning. Her father, who is an old man, met with an accident yesterday, and she had to go home to care for him for a few days. She may be gone two weeks, but will be back when she can."

"That's a pretty state of affairs, I must say!" he exclaimed as he laid down his knife and fork.

"But accidents will happen, you know."

"Do you know that an accident did happen, Mrs. Bowser?"

"Of course—that is, a boy came here with a note for Annie."

"Yes, a boy came here with a note for her, but I have no doubt that it was an ruse to get out of the house."

"But why?"

"Why? Why? Because you were grinding her under the heel of despotism, because never an hour in the day passed that you were not reminding her of her menial position, because you had no more feeling for her than a dog in the street. She was afraid that if she gave notice you would assault her with the poker or butcher knife."

"You know nothing whatever about the matter," replied Mrs. Bowser, with a good deal of spirit. "No girl was ever better treated in a place. Annie has often said she never had as good a one. No one could have lured her away from me."

"If what's the matter, Don't think that because I haven't said anything I have not had my eyes open. A dozen times a week I have heard you grinding away at that poor girl until my blood fairly boiled. It is no wonder that the working people of this country are on the eve of a rebellion. If I was a cook in your kitchen and you ground away under your heel as you have—"

"Don't you think I'm capable of managing our kitchen?" she interrupted.

"No, ma'am, I don't; far from it. You make every cook feel like putting poison in our coffee, and only for me some of them would have done it long ago. They see the difference between us. They see that while your object is to grind them into the earth mine is to lift them up and make their positions bearable."

"And yet the one we had before Annie came quit solely on your account. She told the girl next door that you were going to be afraid of."

"By thunder, woman, but don't talk such nonsense to me!" shouted Mr. Bowser as he shoved back from the table. "No woman on the face of this earth ever made such a remark about me, and you know it. A man to be afraid of! Humph!"

"Well, they are going to send a cook this evening from the intelligence office, and I insist that you engage and manage her. While we don't think alike on the help question, your way is probably the best."

"Don't try to bluff me, Mrs. Bowser!"

"I am not trying."

Mrs. Bowser refused to continue the subject, and they had retired to the sitting room, and half an hour had passed when the doorbell rang.

"That's probably your girl," she said to Mr. Bowser, who was fairly smoking and half asleep, "and you can interview her in the parlor. Don't call her in on my account."

"Don't you be afraid of being called in," he replied as he went down the hall and opened the door.

It was the new cook. She was a red headed girl, with the end of her nose tilting up, and any one but Mr. Bowser would have realized at a glance that an tyrant's heel had yet succeeded in pulverizing her to any extent, but to him she seemed to be humble and half scared.

"I was sent from the intelligence office," she explained as she handed over her slip.

"Exactly, my dear young lady. Please come into the parlor. It has been a beautiful day, hasn't it? You are then obliged to take a menial position, are you?"

"I'm a cook, sir. I'm a good one."

"Yes, you look like a way that is a menial position. From your general appearance I should say that you had seen better days. I pity those who have once had every luxury and cultivated surroundings, but through misfortune have been thrown out upon the cold, selfish world to take care of themselves. However—"

"I have always worked, sir," replied the girl, "and if your wife is in I'd like to see her."

"I see. Yes. My wife is in, but unfortunately she knows nothing about engineering help that is, she has no sympathy with them."

"And who's asking for sympathy, sir? I want $10 a month for doing my work, and I'm not expecting the lady of the house to be weeping over me. If your wife is in I'd like—"

"But she is—is, only I prefer to engage a girl myself. Later on she will show you the kitchen and tell you what is expected of you. This is a place, I am glad to inform you, where we look upon a girl's welfare at heart. At least I do. While you may temporarily be occupying a menial position, I want you to know that I realize you have feelings the same as I have."

"That's very kind of you, indeed!" snorted the girl.

"Now and then I shall come down into the kitchen to speak a word of cheer to you."

"Oh, you will?"

"And let you know that you are not forgotten in your solitude. Do you love to read? My library is open to you, and I shall take great pleasure in selecting the kind of literature you ought to read. Do you love music? If so, there is the piano in the back parlor, I shall have no objections to your going out of an evening, but I shall want to be sure of the character of your company. I shall feel myself in a sense responsible for you, you know."

"What sort of a slanty do you call this anyway?" asked the girl as she began to back off.

"Slanty? Slanty? My dear young lady—"

"I'm not a young lady."

"Then, my dear young woman, I am surprised at your language."

"And I am at yours. I'll not seat here to see the lady of the house and take a place as cook, but I must you, and you begin to chin-chin as if I'm nuttiness. Don't take me for a spring chicken, sir."

"You came here to get a place as cook, and I am going to hire you," answered Mr. Bowser.

"Not unless I see your wife, and maybe not then. If I step in this house you don't come chinning around the kitchen, and you can make your mind to that."

"Chinning! My dear young woman," while Mrs. Bowser grinds the cook under her iron heel, I seek to educate and elevate her. I was simply about to say that you should find a home here—some one to take an interest in you—to sympathize and encourage. You mistake me, it appears."

"Oh, no, I don't," replied the girl. "I want no old rooster hanging around my kitchen, and it would be none of your business about my company. When I can't take care of myself, I'll not be asking advice from such as you."

"Such as me? Please explain."

"You're an old soft soapee."

"My dear young woman"—

"And a pity your wife."

"But you don't understand. I set out"—

"Yes, I know you did, and you may think yourself lucky if I don't tell the first policeman I meet. I sized you up in a minute for an old rascal, and I only stayed on to tell you my opinion of you. If you try to prevent me from leaving the house I'll arouse the neighborhood."

"My dear young woman"— he protested again.

"Rats!" she answered as she walked out and slammed the door behind her.

Mrs. Bowser had heard all the conversation through the folding doors, and when the girl left she sat down and prepared to get off something sarcastic to greet Mr. Bowser. A quarter of an hour passed without his appearance, and then she entered the parlor to find him gone. He had put on his hat and made a break. The cat had also disappeared. A look from the front steps up and down showed that they were not in sight.

Four blocks away in the darkness of evening Mr. Bowser was walking up and down and wondering where it hit him, and the cat was following at his heels and wondering why he would never give up like a man when fairly licked.

It is predicted by Captain Carlson of the Princess Issena, that the present phenomenal unpleasant weather will break very soon. A stretch of days like these just past has been unheard of in this section for several years.

The Scientific American, in its issue of Feb. 4, has a finely illustrated article on the races held at this place Jan. 23-28. An excellent photograph of Frank Croker in his fatal car, also a picture of the car after the accident, is shown.

W. F. Bach, Cleveland; R. W. Bours, Jacksonville; H. Perry and wife, Providence; W. F. Fisher, Chattanooga; R. S. Thompson, Mrs. G. K. Sage, Chicago; H. Heppenheimer and wife, Brooklyn are guests of The Ridgewood.

As an illustration of the amount of business handled at this point by the Florida East Coast railroad, we learn that Agent W. F. Jibb has a force of eleven men employed in and around the depot. Passenger business has been heavier this year than ever before, and the January business is said to have been largely in excess of that done during January last year.

Croker's Death Reconciles Parents.

The death of Frank Croker has brought about a reconciliation between Richard Croker and his wife. Mr. and Mrs. Croker have been estranged for some years. Long before Mr. Croker took up his residence abroad he and his wife had practically separated, although they continued to live in the same house at No. 5 East Seventy fourth street.

There never has been any bitter feeling between the couple, but their interests lay along different lines. Mrs. Croker devote herself to charitable works and to her family. The attacks on her husband during the latter years that he was Tammany chieftain were extremely distasteful to her.

Frank Croker was the favorite son of his father, and he was a very devoted son to his mother. His death was a terrible blow to her and how hard hit Croker was by it was best shown by his haggard face when he arrived from Europe for the funeral.

Mrs. Crocker is a very handsome woman, quiet and refined, and dresses in good taste, but is inclined to a domestic life. She was recognized as one of the most successful teachers in the public schools of New York at the time of her marriage to Mr. Croker. Her chief interests are her church and charitable work and her family. She is a leader among Roman Catholics and is on terms of intimate friendship with Archbishop Farley and other distinguished prelates of the church here and abroad.

From a list of real estate sales made by J. W. Wilkinson, published elsewhere in today's paper, it will be seen that the real estate business has been booming in Daytona. Few, if any, towns in Florida can show such a list of transactions by one dealer. In the building line, also, there seems to be plenty doing, and new buildings are going up on every hand. Daytona is on the map and its people are alive to the situation.

Local Hit By Eli Perkins

Eli made a hit last night which was hugely enjoyed by the audience. His last engagement was at De Land and on the way over here he experienced the usual long wait at New Smyrna where travelers must change cars. While strolling around the depot he accosted a venerable looking old gentleman and asked him how long he had lived in Florida.

"Eighty-six years at Daytona," was the reply.

"Why you must like it here," he exclaimed.

Tears came into the old man's eyes as he replied "Yes; 86 years, but 13 years were spent here at New Smyrna waiting for trains."

The Election.

The election held today to elect a mayor and four councilmen has stirred up little enthusiasm, the vote polled promising to be very light. No returns of course are yet procurable, but the concensus of opinion seems to be that the present incumbents will all be re-elected. It is likely that Geo. H. Clark will be elected to fill the unexpired term of Wm. Atwood, resigned.

The Bowsers' New Cook

Be Puts In Practice Theories of His Own In Trying to Engage Her, but Without Success, and He Leaves the House In Disgust.

[Copyright, 1904, by T. C. McClure.]

UNTIL he got seated at the dinner table the other evening Mr. Bowser had no inkling that anything had happened in the house during the day. Then, missing the cook, he inquired what was the trouble, and Mrs. Bowser explained.

"I am sorry to say that Annie had to leave me this morning. Her father, who is an old man, met with an accident yesterday, and she had to go home to care for him for a few days. She may be gone two weeks, but will be back when she can."

"That's a pretty state of affairs, I must say!" he exclaimed as he laid down his knife and fork.

"But accidents will happen, you know."

"Do you know that an accident did happen, Mrs. Bowser?"

"Of course—that is, a boy came here with a note for Annie."

"Yes, a boy came here with a note for her, but I have no doubt that it was all planned out days beforehand. The girl simply wanted an excuse to get out of the house."

"But why?"

"Why? Why? Because you were grinding her under the heel of despotism, because never an hour in the day passed that you were not reminding her of her menial position, because you had no more feeling for her than a dog in the street. She was afraid that if she gave notice you would assault her with the poker or butcher knife."

"I WAS SENT FROM THE INTELLIGENCE OFFICE."

"You know nothing whatever about the matter," replied Mrs. Bowser, with a good deal of spirit. "No girl was ever better treated in a place. Annie has often said she never had as good a one. No one could have hired her away from me."

"It won't do, madam. Don't think that because I haven't said anything I have not had my eyes open. A dozen times a week I have heard you grinding away at that poor girl until my blood fairly boiled. It is no wonder that the working people of this country are on the eve of a rebellion. If I was a cook in your kitchen and you ground me under your heel as you have"—

"Don't you think I'm capable of managing our kitchen?" she interrupted.

"No, ma'am, I don't; far from it. You make every cook feel like putting poison in our coffee, and only for me some of them would have done it long ago. They see the difference between us. They see that while your object is to grind them into the earth mine is to lift them up and make their positions bearable."

"And yet the one we had before Annie came quit solely on your account. She told the girl next door that you were a man to be afraid of."

"By thunder, woman, but don't talk such nonsense to me!" shouted Mr. Bowser as he shoved back from the table. "No woman on the face of this earth ever made such a remark about me, and you know it. A man to be afraid of! Humph!"

"Well, they are going to send a cook this evening from the intelligence office, and I insist that you engage and manage her. While we don't think alike on the help question, your way is probably the best."

"Don't try to bluff me, Mrs. Bowser."

"I am not trying."

Mrs. Bowser refused to continue the subject, and they had retired to the sitting room, and half an hour had passed when the doorbell rang.

"That's probably your girl," she said to Mr. Bowser, who was lazily smoking and half asleep, "and you can interview her in the parlor. Don't call me in on any account."

"Don't you be afraid of being called in," he replied as he went down the hall and opened the door.

It was the new cook. She was a red headed girl, with the end of her nose tilting up, and any one but Mr. Bowser would have realized at a glance that no tyrant's heel had yet succeeded in pulverizing her to any extent, but to him she seemed to be humble and half heartbroken.

"I was sent from the intelligence office," she explained as she handed over her slip.

"Exactly, my dear young lady. Please come into the parlor. It has been a beautiful day, hasn't it? You are then obliged to take a menial position, are you?"

"I'm a cook, sir, and a good one."

"Yes, yes, but in a way that is a menial position. From your general appearance I should say that you had seen better days. I pity those who have once had every luxury and cultivated surroundings, but through misfortune have been thrown out upon the cold, selfish world to take care of themselves. However"—

"I have always worked, sir," replied the girl, "and if your wife is in I'd like to see her."

"I see. Yes. My wife is in, but unfortunately she knows nothing about employing help that is, she has no sympathy with them."

"And who's asking for sympathy, sir? I want $16 a month for doing my work, and I'm not expecting the lady of the house to be weeping over me. If your wife is not in"—

"But she is in, only I prefer to engage a girl myself. Later on she will show you the kitchen and tell you what is expected of you. This is a place, I am glad to inform you, where we have a girl's welfare at heart. At least I do. While you may temporarily be occupying a menial position, I want you to know that I realize you have feelings, the same as I have."

"That's very kind of you, indeed!" sneered the girl.

"Now and then I shall come down into the kitchen to speak a word of cheer to you."

"Oh, you will!"

"And let you know that you are not forgotten in your solitude. Do you love to read? My library is open to you, and I shall take great pleasure in selecting the kind of literature you ought to read. Do you love music? If so, there is the piano in the back parlor. I shall have no objections to your going out of an evening, but I shall want to be sure of the character of your company. I shall feel myself in a sense responsible for you, you know."

"What sort of a shanty do you call this anyway?" asked the girl as she began to back off.

"Shanty? Shanty? My dear young lady"—

"I'm not a young lady."

"Then, my dear young woman, I am surprised at your language."

"And I am at yours. I am sent here to see the lady of the house and take a place as cook, but I meet you, and you begin to chin-chin a lot of nonsense. Don't take me for a spring chicken, sir."

"You came here to get a place as cook, and I am going to hire you," answered Mr. Bowser.

"Not unless I see your wife, and maybe not then. If I stop in this house you don't come chinning around the kitchen, and you can make up your mind to that."

"Chinning! My dear young woman, while Mrs. Bowser grinds the cook under her iron heel, I seek to elevate and cheer her. I was simply telling you that you should find a home here—some one to take an interest in you—some one to sympathize and encourage. You mistake me, it appears."

"Oh, no, I don't," replied the girl. "I want no old rooster buzzing around my kitchen, and it would be none of your business about my company. When I can't take care of myself, I'll not be asking advice from such as you."

"Such as me? Please explain."

"You're an old soft soaper."

"My dear young woman"—

"And I pity your wife."

"But you don't understand. I set out"—

"Yes, I know you did, and you may think yourself lucky if I don't tell the first policeman I meet. I sized you up in a minute for an old rascal, and I only stayed on to tell you my opinion of you. If you try to prevent me from leaving the house I'll arouse the neighborhood."

"My dear young woman"—he protested again.

"Rats!" she answered as she walked out and banged the door behind her.

Mrs. Bowser had heard all the conversation through the folding doors, and when the girl left she sat down and prepared to get off something sarcastic to greet Mr. Bowser. A quarter of an hour passed without his appearance, and then she entered the parlor to find him gone. He had put on his hat and made a sneak. The cat had also disappeared. A look from the front steps up and down showed that they were not in sight.

Four blocks away in the darkness of evening Mr. Bowser was walking up and down and wondering where it hit him, and the cat was following at his heels and wondering why he would never give up like a man when fairly licked.

DAYTONA is situated upon the west bank of the Halifax River at its widest expanse and midway between the ocean at Ponce Inlet and its outlet at Mosquito Inlet. It is 74 miles by 28 serving line miles from St. Augustine and nine miles from the Atlantic Ocean, and is acknowledged to be without a rival for beauty among the cities of the South. Its site is one which is known as high land for the South, and has been selected by many of the most noted pioneers in search of the finest home and winter resort. Here the Spanish moss, that recurs the street and walks, and among these the later period full-leaved magnolias, cheery berried mandarins, fragrant bays and cool-berried holly, and many other varieties, while in many places the wild grape, the trumpet vine and the amphelopsis climb and cling among the branches forming shady bowers and adding grace and beauty.

The town lies parallel with the Halifax River, and extends for nearly two miles along the shore. This river is the delight of the angler and the sportsman, and forms one of the town's greatest attractions.

The main avenue, that run parallel with or intersect the river are forty feet wide, except Beach street, which is about sixty five feet, but has a half mile of open, beautiful water fronting upon its eastern side, where the tide waters ebb and flow and ripple and across which comes the cooling, invigorating and health-giving breezes from off the wide Atlantic, which temper and render the Halifax climate one of the most perfect in the world. Daytona has many miles of well graded, marled and shelled roads and streets, rendering it the

Wheelman's Paradise

and added to these, but a mile away, are thirty miles of smooth, hard beach, that affords an unrivalled course for long-distance cycling and driving or automobile racing. No town of equal size, North or South, numbers so many wheelmen, and cycling is a favorite pastime with the tourists summer and winter.

The Beautiful Cottages

that have been erected during the past years and are being built are rendering Daytona as famous for its fine homes as for its beautiful river, tree-lined avenues, and they are adding yearly to its attractions.

And the best of these attractions to those coming homes in the South, and reading second only to health-fulness and perfection of climate, is the fact that its population is chiefly composed of cultivated and intelligent people, accustomed to the refinements of home and social life. Added to these features are good churches, good public and private schools, stores, banks, laundry, meat markets, novelty works, an opera house, electric lights for street and house illumination, a good telephone system, ice factory, Lily Water Works, and hot and cold baths, etc., and everything else can be procured that is necessary to make life comfortable. An important feature in the healthfulness of this town is the

Water Supply

which is derived from numerous flowing wells, of which there are probably 200 in the corporate limits. This flow is secured by boring wells to the depth of from 80 to 120 feet, passing through several strata of rock, and this depth assures purity from all surface contamination. The water is slightly impregnated with magnesia and iron, and holds sulphur in the shape of gas, which soon passes away.

The Population of Daytona

proper is about 1,800. Added to this is a suburban population on main shore and peninsula of about 1,000 at Kingston, Blake, Old Sectreeze and Goodall, Seabreeze and Silver Beach, which are properly a part of the town and population.

Daytona Beach

lies one mile east of the town. It is approached by three good bridges over the river and well graded avenues, and is the principal summer resort south of St. Augustine. It has many tourists during the summer than all other places south of that city combined, and is also becoming a favorite winter resort. The beach is white, firm and smooth, by many considered the finest in the world, and the surf bathing is safe and excellent summer and winter. People who have tried Northern and Western summer resorts declare that there are none so perfect in comfort as Daytona beach.

Automobile Race Meet.

The Florida East Coast Automobile Association conducts an annual race meet on the beach, which has now a national reputation as the speediest automobile race course in the world. The Daytona Ormond Beach is hard as Macadam, and an ideal stretch of thirty or more miles without a break makes it the natural racing ground for America.

At low tide the beach is hard for 200 feet and neither carriage wheel, bicycle or pedestrian can make any horrid visible impress on the smooth and well-packed sand. It is no uncommon sight to see cut-rigged bicycles speeding with the velocity of the wind before a stiff breeze along the smooth beach, thus affording the most exhilarating sport known to man. Besides these, miles of hard, delightful refined bonfires bring the lovers of the wheel and vehicles into direct touch with the undefiled ever the broad bridges which span the speedy Halifax River.

The beach from the sandy bluffs to the low-set point at ebbtide, measures about 500 feet, and the average depth of the surf measures about two feet. A continuous gentle swell rolls in from the ocean from one to two feet in depth under normal conditions, making the beach an attractive and absolutely safe place for surf-bathing. Here the infant as well as the grey-haired veteran of many summers, can safely enjoy the luxury of a sea bath throughout the larger part of the year, while the strong and expert swimmer can venture out further to test his strength and skill in battling with the inexhaustible powers of the mighty ocean.

The Peninsula

lying between river and ocean is one half mile wide, and is being rapidly improved, and there are many fine cottages and several good hotels, on open homes, two ocean piers, beach pavilion and a large casino.

A Remarkable Feature

at Daytona has been the yearly improvement in the style and value of the buildings that are being erected for homes. Men of capital of the North and West have become awakened to its advantages for winter residences, and valuable lots are being purchased and costly houses, beautiful in design and finish, are being erected, and beautiful homes, the abodes of wealth and culture are multiplying.

Seabreeze (City Beautiful) and Goodall are settlements on the Ocean side of the peninsula, whereas the Halifax River from Daytona.

At the foot of Ocean Boulevard, Seabreeze, a pier reaches 600 feet across the beach into the ocean, one of the novel. This pier is a favorite resort of those who delight in the sport of fishing. The surf here abounds in trout, pompano, yellowtail, cavalla, whiting, sheepshead and many other varieties of edible fish. During the fall season the famous sea bass affords royal sport, and it has been no uncommon occurrence to land a thousand pounds of this gamey fish in an afternoon, individuals of them ranging from fifteen to thirty-five pounds in weight. Not only does the ocean offer this splendid sport but the Halifax River, only half a mile back of the ocean, is equally famous for its fine fishing, and the varieties that abound in the ocean are present in the river.

DAYTONA is situated upon the west bank of the Halifax River at its fairest expanse and midway between its source at Rulow Bay and its outlet at Mosquito Inlet. It is in latitude 29, seventy four miles from St. Augustine and one mile from the Atlantic Ocean, and is acknowledged to be without a rival for beauty among the cities of the South. Its site is upon what is known as high hammock land that was crowned by nature with a most royal growth of evergreen forest trees, and among the entire [illegible] the town of today, with its [illegible] and well-graded streets. The people is built about the [illegible] that are [illegible] and [illegible], many of them draped with graceful festoons of the gray Spanish moss, that overarch the street and walks, and among these are interspersed tall tropical palmettos, glossy leaved magnolias, fragrant bays and coral berried holly, and many other varieties, while in many places the wild grape, the trumpet vine and the ampelopsis climb and cling among the branches forming shady bowers and adding grace and beauty.

The town lies parallel with the Halifax River, and extends for nearly two miles along the shore. This river is the delight of the angler and the yachtsman and forms one of the town's greatest attractions.

The main avenues that run parallel with or intersect the river are all 100 feet wide, except Beach street, which is about sixty five feet, but has a half mile of open, beautiful water abutting upon its eastern side, where the salt waves ebb and flow and along and across which comes the cooling, invigorating and health giving breezes from off the wide Atlantic, which temper and render the Halifax climate one of the most perfect in the world. Daytona has many miles of well graded, marled and shelled roads and streets, rendering it the

and added to these, but a mile away, are thirty miles of smooth, hard beach, that affords an unrivalled course for long distance cycling and driving or automobile racing. No town of equal size, North or South, numbers so many wheelmen, and cycling is a favorite pastime with the tourists summer and winter.

The Beautiful Cottages

that have been erected during the past years and are being built are rendering Daytona as famous for its fine homes as for its beautiful river, trees and avenues, and they are adding yearly to its attractions.

Not the least of these attractions to those securing homes in the South, and ranking second only to healthfulness and perfection of climate, is the fact that its population is chiefly composed of cultivated and intelligent people, accustomed to the refinements of home and social life. Added to these features are good churches, good public and private schools, stores, hotels, laundry, meat markets, novelty works, an opera house, electric lights for street and house illumination, a good telephone system, ice factory, Lily Water Works, and hot and cold baths, etc., and everything else can be procured that is necessary to make life comfortable. An important feature in the healthfulness of this town is the

which is derived from numerous flowing wells, of which there are probably 300 in the corporate limits. This flow is secured by boring wells to the depth of from 80 to 120 feet, passing through several strata of rock, and this depth assures purity from all surface contamination. The water is slightly impregnated with magnesia and iron, and holds sulphur in the shape of gas, which soon passes away.

The Population of Daytona

proper is about 1,800. Added to this is a suburban population on main shore and peninsula of about 1,000 at Kingston, Blake, Old Seabreeze or Goodall, Seabreeze and Silver Beach, which are properly a part of the town and population.

Daytona Beach

lies one mile east of the town. It is approached by three good bridges over the river and well graded avenues, and is the principal summer resort south of St. Augustine. It has more tourists during the summer than all other places south of that city combined, and is also becoming a favorite winter resort. The beach is wide, firm and smooth, by many considered the finest in the world, and the surf bathing is safe and excellent summer and winter. People who have tried Northern and Western summer resorts declare that there are none so perfect in comfort as Daytona beach.

Automobile Race Meet.

The Florida East Coast Automobile Association conducts an annual race meet on the beach, which has now a universal reputation as the greatest automobile race course in the world. The Daytona Ormond Beach is hard as macadam, and an ideal stretch of thirty or more miles without a break makes it the natural racing ground for America.

At low tide the beach is bared for 300 feet and neither carriage wheel, bicycle or pedestrian can make a hardly visible imprint on the smooth and well-packed sand. It is no uncommon sight to see sail rigged bicycles speeding with the velocity of the wind before a stiff breeze along the smooth beach, thus affording the most exhilarating sport known to man. Besides these, miles of hard shelled, palm-fringed boulevards bring the lovers of the wheel and vehicles into direct touch with the mainland over the broad bridges which span the splendid Halifax River.

The beach from the sandy bluffs to the lowest point at ebbtide, measures about 500 feet, and the average depth of the surf measures about two feet. A continuous gentle swell rolls in from the ocean from one to two feet in depth under normal conditions, making the beach an attractive and absolutely safe place for surf-bathing. Here the infant as well as the grey-haired veteran of many summers, can safely enjoy the luxury of a sea bath throughout the larger part of the year, while the strong and expert swimmer, can venture out further to test his strength and skill in battling with the inexhaustible powers of the mighty ocean.

The Peninsula

lying between river and ocean is one-half mile wide, and is being rapidly improved, and there are many fine cottages and several good hotels, an opera house, two ocean piers, beach pavilion and a large casino.

A Remarkable Feature

at Daytona has been the yearly improvement in the style and value of the buildings that are being erected for homes. Men of capital of the North and West have become awakened to its advantages for winter residences, and valuable lots are being purchased and costly houses, beautiful in design and finish, are being erected, and beautiful homes, the abodes of wealth and culture are multiplying.

Seabreeze (City Beautiful) and Goodall are settlements on the Ocean side of the peninsula across the Halifax River from Daytona.

At the foot of Ocean Boulevard, Seabreeze, a pier reaches 600 feet across the beach into the swimming surf of the ocean. This pier is a favorite resort of those who delight in the sport of fishing. The surf here abounds in trout, pompano, yellowtail, cavalle, whiting, drum, sheepshead and many other varieties of edible fish. During the fall season the famous sea bass affords royal sport, and it has been no uncommon occurrence to land a thousand pounds of this gamey fish in an afternoon, individuals of them ranging from fifteen to thirty-five pounds in weight. Not only does the ocean offer this splendid sport but the Halifax River, only half a mile back of the ocean, is equally famous for its fine fishing, and the varieties that abound in the ocean are present in the river.

Hunting and fishing good. Experienced guides and dogs may be had at reasonable prices.
